In this project, the dynamics of two fish species in the Black Sea ecosystem (anchovy and bluefish) will be modeled using a two-dimensional predator-prey differential equation system incorporating logistic growth and fishing factors. While attempting to estimate model parameters using real data, the equilibrium points and stability of the system will be examined to analyze potential overfishing thresholds and critical risk intervals.